The telecommunications sector is regulated by the National Telecommunications Regulatory Agency (ANRT).

>>> National Telecommunications Regulatory Agency (ANRT)

A public institution in charge of the regulation and supervision of the telecommunications sector. Established under the authority of the Head of Government, the Agency is vested with legal personality and financial autonomy. Its core responsibilities encompass contributing to the development of the regulatory framework governing the telecommunications sector, defining technical and administrative standards, authorizing terminal equipment and radio installations intended for connection to public telecommunications networks, as well as fostering and safeguarding the conditions for fair and sustainable competition within telecommunications markets.

Telecommunications Sector Indicators in Morocco – ANRT Observatory as of End-March 2025

- A mobile internet penetration rate of 108.23%.
- A 4G usage rate of 92.3%.
- 1.12 million fiber-optic subscribers.
- A mobile telephone penetration rate of 155.84%.
- The launch of 5G scheduled for November 2025, with a population reaching coverage of 25% by 2026 and 70% by 2030.
